Tourism, Hospitality and Sustainability in Times of Uncertainty

University of Nigeria, Nsukka
26–29 March 2023

CALL FOR PAPERS

Association for Tourism Development in Nigeria (ATDiN) is delighted to invite you to the 6th Biennial Multidisciplinary Conference slated for March 2023.

This conference aims to contribute to the ongoing discussion about the effects of uncertainty on the tourism and hospitality industries, including the COVID-19 pandemic and related health issues, climate change challenges, the greenhouse effect, insecurity, and war, most notably the recent Russia-Ukraine war. It is envisaged that the conference would find innovative approaches to hospitality, tourist development, and sustainability. The conference's sub-themes are devoted to studying creative ways and the strategic thinking required to adapt and execute processes and practices to achieve such desired hospitality and tourist development throughout the world. Building upon the sub-themes, we invite delegates to study specific aspects of the hospitality and tourism industry in times of uncertainty and recommend a more realistic method to advance the industry sustainably.

The University of Nigeria, commonly referred to as UNN, is a federal University located in Nsukka, Enugu State. It is in the Tropical Rain Forest which boosts rainforest tourism, natural tourism, indigenous tourism, rural and remote tourism, among others. The diverse range of tourism divisions will feature through the ATDiN programme and also offer opportunities to connect academics, educators, industry, local suppliers, local artists and indigenous operators with one another. A range of pre and post-conference workshops and site visits will also be included in the conference programmes (at additional costs and subject to numbers) to ensure delegates have the best opportunities to consider and contribute to the conference experience.

We're looking forward to welcoming ATDiN's 2023 delegates to the University of Nigeria, Nsukka and Enugu State tourism sites.

Conference Theme

The conference theme is 'Tourism, Hospitality and Sustainability in Times of Uncertainty'.

Tourism and hospitality have continued to grow considerably following advancements in space-shrinking technologies (communication and transportation) for the last six decades. This growth has propelled governments of many advanced and emerging economies to promote tourism as a viable means of economic development and income redistribution, cultural revitalization, environmental conservation, social cohesion and self-determination. However, tourism development can be threatened during uncertain times as with the COVID-19 pandemic and related health issues, challenges of climate change, the greenhouse effect, insecurity and war, most notably, the recent Russia-Ukraine war. The closure of national and international borders shut down of airports and hotels, health concerns and social distancing, concerns over gas emission, and insecurity of lives and property of tourists occasioned by the above challenges have remarkably affected the tourism and hospitality industry. These uncertainties have threatened the way tourism operates in unprecedented ways because the industry depends on the wellness, safety, and ability of travellers and people to move from one place to another to remain relevant. Such negative effects have raised serious global concerns about tourism's capability to contribute to sustainable development as millions of revenues usually generated through tourists' expenditures have dwindled, millions of employees have been laid off, international visitor profile has drastically reduced with many destinations left unattractive.

Nevertheless, the experiences garnered from the impacts of these uncertainties create an opportunity for tourism researchers, planners and developers to interrogate the age-long narrative held about tourism planning if the industry must contribute to sustainable development. Some reactions to the challenges can revolve around the United Nations' sustainable development goals and the aligning environmental, economic, social and cultural principles. Consequently, this conference aims to contribute to the ongoing discourse on the impacts of uncertainties on the tourism and hospitality industry to identify new ways of approaching its development and sustainability.

Abstracts and full papers are welcomed from all disciplines, provided they speak to the conference theme. Researchers, industry practitioners, government officials, postgraduate students and other interested persons are encouraged to submit stimulating abstracts of not more than 200 words that broaden our ways of thinking about the impacts of the pandemic and other challenges on tourism, hospitality and sustainability. The conference adopts physical and virtual modes of paper preparation to ensure wider participation.

All papers should include:

- An abstract of approximately 150 words.
- A list of 4-6 keywords.
- An introduction that provides an overview of the paper and the significance of the research.
- A literature review that provides the background to the research and outlines the context and/or academic literature that informs the research.
- A research approach that describes the broad theoretical orientation and/or methodological approach.
- A description and application of the research findings.
- A conclusion that provides a summation of the paper and its contribution to tourism, hospitality and/or events education and/or research.

Paper Presentation

Those authors whose full research papers and working research papers are accepted will have the opportunity to present their work in either an oral or visual presentation format.

Oral Presentations

Oral presentations will be allocated 20 minutes each (15 minutes for the presentation with five minutes for questions). A Chair will run each concurrent session of presentations. If conference delegates are interested in chairing a session, please contact the Organising Committee at conference@atdin.org.ng

Visual Presentations

Visual presentations will be held in an Ideas Factory with the opportunity to discuss work one-on-one in a creative presentation environment. The Ideas Factory provides delegates with the opportunity to present research in PPT form rather than a traditional oral presentation.

Accommodation

A wide range of accommodations to suit all budgets and tastes can be found within the University of Nigeria, Nsukka and its neighbourhood. These include lodges, hostels, guest-houses, etc. The city also has excellent restaurants, bars and entertainment centres, and many other captivating activities. ATDiN is interacting with officials of the guest houses within the campus to offer special and agreeable rates to delegates.
